Location information
@JohnDoe01049567

Manage the location information Twitter uses to personalize your experience.

Personalize based on places you've been
Twitter always uses some information, like where you signed up and your current location, to help show you more relevant content. When this setting is enabled, Twitter may also personalize your experience based on other places you've been.

Precise location   Disabled
If enabled, Twitter will collect, store, and use your device's precise location, such as GPS information. This lets Twitter improve your experience — for example, showing you more local content, ads, and recommendations.

Off-Twitter activity
@JohnDoe01049567

Manage how Twitter uses your online activity outside of Twitter, such as the websites you visit, to personalize your experience.

Allow use of where you see Twitter content across the web
This setting lets Twitter keep track of your visits to other websites that integrate Twitter content, such as embedded timelines. That information makes Twitter better for you, such as by personalizing your experience. This web browsing history will never be stored with your name, email, or phone number. Learn more

Personalize based on your inferred identity
Twitter will always personalize your experience based on information you've provided, as well as the devices you've used to log in. When this setting is enabled, Twitter may also personalize based on other inferences about your identity, like devices and browsers you haven't used to log in to Twitter or email addresses and phone numbers similar to those linked to your Twitter account.
