

LinkedIn is a professional networking site whose users establish connections with coworkers, customers, business contacts, and potential employees and employers. Users post and share information about current and previous employment, education, military activities, specialties, and interests. To limit exposure of your personal information, you can review and manage who can view your profile and activities.

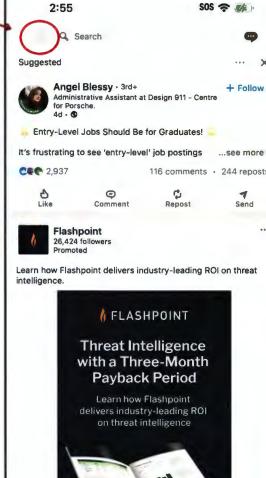

Click View profile will take you to the profile page shown on the next page where you can access your information.

Click the Setting cog wheel to access important profile settings such as:

Clicking this edit button allows you to change your displayed name, name pronunciation, pronouns, current working position, education, and location that appears on your profile.

Add Section is where you are able to add various types of content to your profile, such as job experience, education, projects, and other profile-related information

When posting on LinkedIn, you are able to verify who can see your posts. Only post content that you are comfortable sharing with others, otherwise be sure to limit your views to just your close connections.

My Network list groups of individuals you are connected with, as well as recommends people and groups you can follow.

Home takes you to your main feed, which is where you see posts shared by your connections.
